

Terri Nordin, M.D.

Dr. Terri Nordin is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Family Medicine and Community Health at Robert Wood Johnson Medical School. A Pisacano Scholar and fellowship-trained in maternity care, she provides personal primary care to her patients of all ages that acknowledges the context of their family unit. She brings a family-centered approach to the prenatal and birthing care she provides. She has a special interest in teaching medical students and family medicine residents how to strive for delivering the highest-quality of care that is personalized and centered on patients and their families. She has co-authored articles addressing personal doctoring, the Patient-Centered Medical Home, and the importance of the doctor-patient relationship.

Undergraduate School and Area of Concentration:

- Iowa State University, Family and Consumer Science Studies, Bachelor of Science

Graduate Schools and fields of study:

- University of Iowa Carver College of Medicine, Doctor of Medicine

Residency:

- UMDNJ-Robert Wood Johnson Medical School, Family Medicine

Fellowship:

- UMDNJ-Robert Wood Johnson Medical School, Maternity Care
- Doris Duke Clinical Research Fellowship in 2005

Board Certification:

- American Board of Family Medicine